WORKING TOGETHER TO CARE FOR BABY TEETH

The American Academy of Pediatric Dentistry (AAPD)¹, the American Dental Association (ADA), and the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) all recommend that children have their first dental visit by Age 1.

At this early visit, dentists perform a brief oral examination, deliver preventive information regarding oral health and development, discuss and demonstrate home care techniques, and provide anticipatory guidance for the child's caregiver.

- The age one visit helps to support a pattern of lifelong oral health care by establishing a dental home, and reduces the need for more complex treatment.
- Children who wait until the ages of 2 or 3 to have their first dental visit are more likely to require restorative and emergency visits.
- Children with a dental visit before age 1 have 40% lower dental costs in their first five years of life compared to children with later visits.
- Late dental visits result in increased cost due to the dental and medical procedures often necessary to combat advanced dental decay. (AAPD)
