We need to start caring for your baby’s teeth as soon as they start to grow. Baby teeth have many important jobs, like:

- Chewing food
- Helping with speech development
- Acting as placeholders so permanent teeth grow into the right places

Experts recommend that children see a dentist by their first birthday and here’s why:

- Kids and families start a relationship with a dentist early on, starting good habits early to avoid cavities.
- Dentists can show you the best way to brush your child’s teeth and talk about which foods and drinks are best.
- To give your child a positive first experience with a dentist so they will want to come back!
- After looking in their mouth, the dentist may brush your child’s teeth and apply fluoride.
- If they see decay or something unusual, they may need to do an x-ray.
- At the end of the first visit, your child’s dentist will talk with you to decide how often your child should come back for check-ups.

Baby teeth can get holes — also called cavities — as soon as they grow in, which can be as early as 6 months old. If they are not treated, cavities can cause:

- Pain
- Infections
- Lead to more expensive dental treatments
